ED TAYLOR
WORSHIPFUL MASTER

I would like to thank all of the Brothers of LA Harbor Lodge #332 for electing me as Worshipful Master for the 2013 year. I would like to say that this is one of the greatest accomplishments in my Masonic journey. The previous years have proved very successful for the Lodge and its membership growth and I plan on continuing this proud tradition.

Our Installation will commence on January 12th, 2013 at 5:00pm with dinner and entertainment to follow afterwards. The theme will be country/western so feel free to dress up as your favorite cowboy or cowgirl. On the following Wednesday the 16th of January I will host a dinner for the new officers and their wives or significant others. I also extend the invitation to the Eastern Star, DeMolay and Jobs Daughters. We will take the opportunity to go over our calendars for the year and ensure that we support each others in our journey through 2013. I look forward to seeing all of you at Installation and throughout the Masonic year. I end this by saying thanks again and I look forward to serving in the East this year!

Edward Taylor, Worshipful Master

FOR REFLECTION

ENOCH & MASONIC TRADITION

In the study of the sciences, in teaching them to his children and his contemporaries, and in instituting the rites of initiation, Enoch enjoyed for many years a peaceful, pious, and useful life. The crimes of mankind had increased to such a height that, in the expressive words of Holy Writ, "every imagination of the thoughts of man's heart" led him to despair. According to a Masonic tradition, Enoch, disgusted with the wickedness that surrounded him, and appalled at the thought of its inevitable consequences, fled to the solitude and secrecy of Mount Moriah. There he devoted himself to prayer and pious contemplation. This spot was first consecrated by his presence, afterwards to be made still more holy the sacrifices of Abraham, David, and Solomon. It was here that he was given those instructions which were to preserve the wisdom of the Antediluvians to posterity when the world, with the exception of but one family, should have been destroyed by the forthcoming flood. The circumstances which occurred at that time are recorded in a tradition which forms what has been called the great Masonic "Legend of Enoch", and which runs to this effect: Enoch, being inspired by the Most High, and in commemoration of a wonderful vision built a temple under the ground, and dedicated it to God. His son, Methuselah, constructed the building; although he was not acquainted with his father's motives. This temple consisted of nine brick vaults, situated perpendicularly beneath each other, and communicating by apertures left in the arch of each vault. Enoch then caused a triangular plate of gold to be made, each side of which was a cubit long lying on a block of agate of the same form. On the upper plate he engraved the ineffable characters, the true name of the deity and placing it on a pedestal of white marble depositing the whole within the deepest arch. When this subterranean building was completed, he made a door of stone, attaching to it a ring of iron, by which it might be occasionally raised. He placed it over the uppermost arch and so covered it over that the aperture could not be discovered. Enoch himself was not permitted to enter it but once a year. Following the deaths of Enoch, Methuselah, and Lamech, and the destruction of the world by the deluge, all knowledge of this temple, and of the sacred treasure which it contained, was lost until, in after times, it was accidentally discovered by another distinguished Freemason who like Enoch was engaged in the erection of the Temple on the same spot. The legend goes on to inform us that after Enoch had completed the subterranean temple, fearing that the principles of those arts and sciences which he had cultivated with so much assiduity would be lost in that general destruction of which he had received a prophetic vision, erected two pillars, the one of marble, to withstand the influence of fire, and the other of brass, to resist the action of water. On the pillar of brass he engraved the history of the creation, the principles of the arts and sciences, and the doctrines of Speculative Freemasonry as they were practiced in his times. On the one of marble he inscribed characters in hieroglyphics, indicating that near the spot where they stood a precious treasure was deposited in a subterranean vault. Josephus gives an account of similar pillars in the First Book of his Antiquities .."they made two pillars the one of brick, the other of stone; they inscribed their discoveries on them both, that, in case the pillar of brick should be destroyed by the flood, the pillar of stone might remain and exhibit those discoveries to mankind. Now this remains in the land of Siriad to this day." Enoch, having completed these labours, called his descendants around him on Mount Moriah, and having warned them in the most solemn manner of the consequences of their wickedness, exhorted them to forsake their idolatries and return once more to the worship of the true God. Masonic tradition informs us that he then delivered up the government of the Craft to his grandson, Lamech, and disappeared from the earth.

Coming to you for the first time in fourteen years as Senior Warden Greetings: I just want to say thank you for electing me to this position, it seems like a millennium ago that I was Senior Warden...it was!

Being out as long as I have been I have noticed a lot since getting back in line... Overall Masonry is getting younger, wiser and more challenging. Younger look around what is going on at Lodge and Lodges in general is invigorating. The activities are now geared toward the younger working class who wants the time to socialize as well as meet, so meetings are more fluid. They want community involvement, no longer being in the back-ground, they want to lead; and they want their families involved as well. Wiser...most are Masonic internet savvy before they come to the Lodge for the first time...THEY HAVE DONE THEIR HOMEWORK... This is making our Fraternity stronger by raising the education bar of the Craft as a whole... keeping those who have been in on their toes by the questions the new member have and by keeping the answers coming to fulfill their new found quest. The challenge---is to answer the needs of the new Mason by developing programs, education, and involvement within the time frame of today's world.

I challenge our new members to be vocal on what they would like to see and energetic in carrying out the programs of the Lodge to meet all the needs of our membership.

One last thing...I want to talk just one moment about what Eastern Star is doing with their Special Project. This is not a pitch on their behalf, but a lesson that I find needed throughout...Every year Eastern Star takes on a pet project and it is selected by the Worthy Grand Matron as an accomplishment in Charity. This is usually some Cancer Fund, Paws for Pets or some other great cause that is not Eastern Star, but will profit from the members of the Order...That being said this year's project the Worthy Grand Matron has selected is to create a whole new web site for the Order. She has taken a bold step breaking away from going outside with her focus, but turning it to the members of the Order. Charity begins at home...Through her foresight she sees that the Order will benefit from this and will help in keeping the Order around in the future. The lesson: Do Something to make a mark, money talks, but actions walk meaning that you can be involved with or without time or money, so make time or money not the excuse...Your presence is always revered and you always have an input.

By: Dale Francis Ogden, Junior Warden

Greetings from the Station of the Junior Warden. It is a great honor to be an officer of this Los Angeles Harbor Lodge #332 and I hope I live up to your expectations. As Junior Warden, it is one of my duties to feed the craft, and I hope we can make some improvement in that regard this year. I plan to have several members rotate so that we have a little more variety in our Wednesday night meals. But I need your cooperation.

Mike Logan tried this last year and I want to see if we can make it work. One of the problems we have with Wednesday dinners is knowing how people show up and Mike tried to get everyone to RSVP. I would like to try that again. Too many times we have cooked for 20-25 people and 15 show up for dinner. A few times we cooked for 20 and 24-25 showed. We could be sure that everyone has a meal and minimize the cost and waste if everyone RSVP'ed. Anyone who wants a standing reservation can let me know and there will always be a dinner for you (and we expect you to pay for dinner) unless you let me know otherwise by Tuesday afternoon. You can RSVP by Tuesday afternoon on Facebook at LA Harbor Lodge #332 or by email at dfo@cox.net. If this does not work then perhaps we could have two prices for dinner: $10 if your RSVP, $15 if you do not. Think about it.

In furthering the most important tenets of Free Masonry, Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, we expect to have many social and charitable events this coming year and your participation is crucial to the success of these events of of your Lodge. Remember, nothing happens unless we make it happen.

Fraternally,
Dale F. Ogden
